'INFLUENCE' BY LEE GRISHAM

Most people see coaching as a bunch of X's and O's, or wins and losses and many coaches will tell you that this is the bottom line. Just like in business, if the bottom line is not taken care of then the coach will be replaced. With the threat of being replaced looming, coaches place a premium on the bottom line.

If coaches can put aside the x's and o's for awhile and take care of their other, less notable, job responsibilities then the bottom line should take care of itself. Those responsibilities range from custodian to counselor to career planner to salesperson. On a daily basis, coaches discover there is more to coaching than x's and o's.

Coaches of successful programs know that if you exhibit a willingness to do whatever it takes to win, the players will do the same. When the coach shows up early to prepare for the practice, then the players get the sense that practice is important and will most often reflect that attitude. If a coach takes time to help their players excel in the classroom, then the player will start to believe that academics matter. The coach has to create the sense of importance in order for the players to believe in it.

Once coaches realize that they are responsible for every phase of the program then decisions are based on what is best for the program. The parents and community realize that decisions are not going to be influenced by individuals, but what is best for the whole program. This creates the belief that the program comes first. In times of discontentment, there will be little validity paid to the accusations that the coach plays politics. The coach just looks out for the program.

As coaches, we influence the lives of our players and through our actions as well as words. With the influence we have on our players, we should strive to get them to believe in themselves and the program. We have to believe in our players, our sport, our school and our community. If we can truly believe in these things our players will begin to believe that these components matter for the good of the program. Remember, the players do not care how much you know till they know how much you care.

BILL EVANS

I retired in 2001 after coaching for 44 years. Forty-three years at Leon High School and one year at Fair Oaks High School. I applied for the Boys Basketball coach at Fair Oaks at the age of twenty-two. As I was interviewed by the School Board they told me that I would be coaching girls also. I had never once thought about coaching girls. Not only was I the coach for boys and girls from seventh grade up, I also taught Science, General Business and was typing instructor and High School Principal. This was a very enjoyable and gratifying year. The following year Marquez and Jewett consolidated and I was hired to coach all sports with the exception of football and track. What a blessing it was for me the next 43 years! My volleyball teams were in the State Tournament 19 times, with nine State Championship wins. (Two coaches association Tournaments in Abilene). We were the first UIL State Champs in 1967 – Class B.

I am very proud of the following facts:

- 76 game winning streak 1986 – 1987
- 2 State Championships
- 29 consecutive years 1973 – 2001 never lost a district game
- 40-0 State Champs 1991
- 36 District Championships
- 35 Regional Tournament appearances
- 20 Regional Championships
- Numerous All-State Girls TGCA
- Listed in National Federations Record book as one of the winningest coaches in America
- Texas winningest coach in volleyball with a record of 1079 wins and 181 losses
- Over 800 wins in girls basketball
- Numerous District Championships in Girls basketball and regional appearances
- Several boys basketball championships and two regional championships in baseball
- I believe one of my greatest and most exciting feats was winning eight District Championships in four sports in two years

For the past 13 years I have served as minister of Marquez Baptist Church. I currently serve as president of Jewett Economic Development Corp., previously as Jewett City councilman and currently serve on the Leon School Board. I have a farm and I am in the cattle business.

After retiring from Leon, I assisted the volleyball program in Centerville for two years. The second year Centerville won B-District for the first time in their school history. For the past three years I have worked in the volleyball program in Normangee. The past two years Normangee played in the regional finals.

So, you can see I have been quite busy since retirement – doing something that I truly enjoy.

TERRI PLAGENS

Born in Huntsville, Texas, and raised in Houston, Terri Plagens knew since the 8th grade that she was called to be a teacher and a coach. After receiving her teaching certification from Sam Houston State University in 1978, Plagens experienced a baptism by fire in her first teaching assignment at Trinity High School where she coached varsity basketball, volleyball, and track in addition to 7th and 8th grade volleyball, basketball, and track. As the school's first female coach, Plagens rose to the challenge of successfully managing the enormity of her job as well as proving her competence to the traditional male establishment and to the school's competing athletes.

From 1980 through 1984, Plagens worked at Kingwood Middle School teaching health and PE, and coaching 7th grade volleyball and 8th grade basketball. Following her four year term at KMS, she moved to Kingwood High School where she remained until 2006. At KHS, Plagens taught American history, and over the course of 22 years, coached freshman volleyball and basketball, and varsity softball and golf. For her ability to make history come alive for her students and her invaluable contributions to her fellow instructors, Plagens was awarded Kingwood High School's Teacher of the Year in 1995. In 2006, she was offered a position as Instructional Coach for Atascocita High School's social studies department, where she continues to coordinate instruction and oversee implementation of grading practices and district assessment.

In the early 1990s, compelled by her commitment to recognizing the efforts of female athletes, Plagens and Sandra Mader worked tirelessly at promoting softball's acceptance as a UIL sport. Their efforts were successful, and in 1993 Plagens' KHS team participated in the state tournament. They then worked on guidelines and procedures that allowed softball to be adopted by TGCA. Plagens and Mader then worked on getting the all star game added. Plagens and Mader were then selected as the all-star coaches in the state's first all-star game. A long-time member of TGCA, Plagens sat on the softball committee from 1993-2002 and served as regional director of TGCA from 2000-2002. During this time, Plagens also shared her coaching expertise through speaking engagements at several summer clinics.

Although she had no female coaches as role models, Plagens has been an inspiration and role model to the many athletes whom she has coached over the years. She has been fearless in her efforts to take on challenges, and in her determination to focus on the positive. By believing in her athletes, she taught them to believe in themselves. And while Plagens loves coaching, she sees herself as a teacher, first, affirming that "the better teacher you are, the better coach you are." This applies to her students, as well, and Plagens unfailingly reminds them: "The better student you are, the better athlete you are." A gifted and inspirational coach, Plagens truly believes that teaching and coaching is a calling, and she attributes her success both on and off the field to her love for what she does and to the support of close friends and family.

In 2003 his state championship team was selected as the USA Today National Champion and Coach Lombard was selected as the USA Today and the WBCA National High School Coach of the Year. His 2008 team won the 3A State Championship this past March, and the final game was his 1000th win. Joe's wife Babs teaches Language Arts at Canyon Junior High. He has two children, Lindy who coaches at Colleyville Heritage and Tate who coaches at Crawford.
